Moncton shootings. Sask. officers travel to New Brunswick to pay tribute to RCMP comrades killed in line of duty last week

MARCO VIGLIOTTI

Saskatchewan police personnel joined thousands of their colleagues across the country on Tuesday in Moncton to pay tribute to three RCMP officers killed in last week's shootings in the southeastern New Brunswick city.

Five Regina police members — including Supt. Lance Dudar, as well as three Saskatoon police officials — have joined a number of RCMP officers from Saskatchewan's F Division in travelling to Moncton to attend a regimental funeral in honour of their fallen comrades.

"Just arrived at the muster point for the RCMP funerals in Moncton ... sad sad day," Dudar wrote on Twitter on Tuesday morning, adding that he was unsure whether the Moncton Coliseum would "be big enough" to hold all the officers attending the service from across Canada.

Sgt. Craig Cleary, spokesman for Saskatchewan Mounties, said an unspecified number of representatives of the province's F Division and of the Regina-based Depot Division attended Tuesday's funeral, where they were joined by members of every RCMP division in Canada.

"Some members may be going to the funeral at their own expense and we have no way of truly knowing the exact number of members from each division in attendance," Cleary told Metro by email.

Justin Bourque, 24, is suspected of shooting and killing the three officers and severely injuring two other officers during a rampage that paralyzed Moncton on June 4.

After a frenetic manhunt that brought the city of about 70,000 to a standstill, Bourque was finally arrested by police in the early hours of June 6.

Saskatchewan has a profoundly deep connection to the national police force, as all RCMP officers go through training at Regina's Depot Division.

"Our thoughts are with our colleagues in New Brunswick during this difficult and tragic time," Cleary added.

Food delivery firm thriving

Tech. Sask. startup SkipTheDishes winning awards and expanding to new cities in west

SARAH TAGUIAM

Jack Keaton's BBQ & Grill owner Kristi Huber says partnering with online food delivery service SkipTheDishes has allowed her business to reach new customers. ROSS ROMANIUK/METRO IN REGINA

A local web startup has enticed Saskatchewanians to skip the dishes and use its online delivery service, and the budding tech company is also hoping to draw Alberta foodies.

The brainchild of four Saskatoon and Prince Albert entrepreneurs, SkipTheDishes has made waves in Canada's technology scene. Recently, the company won the annual Innovation Challenge sponsored by Saskatchewan-born entrepreneur and past CBC Dragons' Den panellist Brett Wilson. It also received grants last week from the Manitoba government for its work in Winnipeg.

"It was a great way for us to get the recognition and the reassurance that our business works," co-founder Andrew Chau told Metro.

Chau and his team won a $15,000 prize through the Innovation Challenge, and they plan to use it to expand their business in Alberta.

SkipTheDishes is operating in five Prairie cities — Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg, Red Deer, Alta., and, most recently, Calgary — and delivers on behalf of about 500 restaurants.

"We have a very strong Saskatchewan presence, and we're planning on continuing to grow not only locally but bring our technology first to Calgary and then to Edmonton," Chau said.

Unlike other delivery services, SkipTheDishes has its own fleet of some 60 couriers who bring food to customers from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

"Partnering with SkipTheDishes allowed us to reach a different branch of customers," said Kristi Huber, owner of Jack Keaton's BBQ & Grill in Regina.

"We originally didn't offer delivery, but now we're able to with this service."

The startup is beginning to offer a GPS feature on its mobile application, through which customers can track their food orders as they're en route.

"Of course, there are always challenges to overcome," Huber said, "but ... they're very knowledgeable and it's always helpful to have local guys working with us."

Newspaper boxes face added restrictions

A city council decision set to take effect next January could limit how certain newspapers reach readers on Saskatoon streets.

Coun. Darren Hill, who requested an inquiry in 2012, says this is partly in response to Metro's arrival more than two years ago.

"Nobody did that aggressive placement in residential neighbourhoods that Metro did," he said.

He also says he received "dozens" of complaints after Metro boxes began showing up.

"They started coming in as soon as those boxes started dropping," said Hill, adding that calls did not persist after the initial complainants were told a review is in process.

While the policy states its goal is to ensure vendors do not "adversely affect vehicular and pedestrian traffic and safety," Hill says he speaks for most citizens in his view that the containers are ugly.

"They are unattractive," he said. "People do not want them in residential neighbourhoods."

But Metro Western Canada group publisher Steve Shrout says this creates an unbalanced playing field in Saskatoon's print-media landscape.

"It's awarding a competitive advantage to anyone who offers the home-delivery model," said Shrout.

Although he said some aspects of the council document — including the hike on operating fees — are comparable to other municipalities, the piece about residential neighbourhoods is "vastly different" and doesn't reflect demands.

"We have had phone calls (from people) asking where they can put a box or if we can put a box in their area," he said. "People should have a choice of which news to enjoy in their area."

Each stand is carefully monitored for activity, condition and placement, said Shrout, and the company responds to concerns within 24 hours.

"Any boxes that we currently have are producing," he said.

Shrout adds that the entrance of Metro into Saskatoon highlights the city's emergence as a metropolitan centre, and council targeting this industry gives the wrong impression.

"Is Saskatoon open for business or aren't they?" he asked.

Sitting MLA also working as police officer: Opposition

Premier Brad Wall says he's OK with allowing a politician to temporarily return to his old job as a police officer while retraining and recertifying.

Prince Albert–Carlton MLA Darryl Hickie has been training for his return to active police duty when his political term is up in two years.

Hickie said in April that he wouldn't run again in the next provincial election expected in 2016 and that he planned to return to the force.

But the Opposition NDP says Prince Albert residents who have encountered Hickie in the course of his investigations in recent days have raised concerns.

NDP justice critic John Nilson says people have told the Opposition they're uncomfortable that a politician can conduct investigations involving his constituents.

The premier says Hickie will quit his political post if he decides to return to active duty when his training ends later this month.

"I am certainly comfortable with a temporary arrangement and his continued focus on the constituents of PA Carlton while retraining and recertifying. Should Mr. Hickie decide to return to active duty at the conclusion of his retraining later this month he will be stepping down as an MLA," Wall said in a statement emailed to media Tuesday.

"Darryl has received approval from the Conflict of Interest Commissioner for his reinstatement."

Nilson acknowledged that politicians can have other jobs, but he's questioning how Hickie can collect two salaries paid for by taxpayers.

"Here, on the face of it, there's an appearance of conflict, especially when you work two taxpayer-funded jobs. That's the part that's an issue," he said.

"The problem is that you have access to information as an MLA that maybe the police shouldn't have and vice versa. Police can have access to all kinds of identity information that an MLA can't have."

Hickie has represented the constituency of Prince Albert–Carlton since 2007. He served as minister for corrections, public safety and policing from 2007 to 2009 and most recently was tasked with leading an all-party committee on improving traffic safety.

Sask. tattooist and amputee shows the 'Upside of Disruption'

TEDxRegina. Notable speakers at annual event included a jewelry designer, naturalist and eco-friendly inventor

SARAH TAGUIAM
Metro in Regina

Self-described Saskatchewan-based "tattoo artist-turned-cyborg" Terry Oh spoke in the University of Regina on Tuesday at the annual TEDxRegina speaker event.

Staying true to the event's theme — The Upside of Disruption — Oh, who lost his leg in a motorcycle accident three years ago, told a huge crowd how he used the tragedy as a springboard for a better perspective in life. "It's made me focus more on my mission in life," Oh told Metro. "I'm using that terrible situation to my advantage and trying to spread a positive outlook to people who have something taken away from them."

Since the accident, Oh, who owns In the Flesh tattoo shop in Regina, has partnered with Alberta-based Alleles Design Studio to create artistic and wearable prosthetic covers for lower-limb amputees.

Basic lightweight plastic covers with the Alleles' standard rococo design sell between $350 and $450, while custom covers designed by Oh could cost up to $750. "It can be daunting wearing something like this," said Oh, pointing to his prosthetic leg.

"But I'm part man, part machine and I want everyone else like me to see that the machine part is beautiful, as well."

Apart from Oh, seven other notable speakers shared their stories during the event, including jewelry designer Rachel Mielke, naturalist Trevor Herriot and eco-friendly inventor Eric de Waal.

"We wanted to pick a theme that captured the state of our city right now," said TEDxRegina spokesman Allan Pugla. "Due to the city's economic boom, there's been a lot of construction and dissent about the new stadium and water treatment plants ... but from all that storm, there's a silver lining."

And Oh, Pugla said, embodies that theme. "When I came out of the hospital I thought, 'I want to be a better man,' and it's events like these that make it easy for me to strive for better things," Oh said.

Sask. drivers face stiffer vehicle seizures for offences

Drivers in Saskatchewan caught using cellphones twice in the course of a year will have their vehicles seized for up to a week under provincial regulations to take effect on June 27.

Kelley Brinkworth, spokeswoman for Saskatchewan Government Insurance, says the new provincial rules lay out stiffer vehicle seizure penalties for drivers engaging in "high-risk" behaviour including impaired driving and excessive speeding.

Quoted

"Impaired driving, distracted driving, excessive speeding ... are the top contributing factors to fatal crashes in the province."

Kelley Brinkworth, spokeswoman for Saskatchewan Government Insurance

"Impaired driving, distracted driving, excessive speeding ... are the top contributing factors to fatal crashes in the province," Brinkworth told Metro.

Under the new system, impaired drivers will face immediate roadside vehicle seizures increasing in severity from three days to 14 days, depending on driver experience and the number of previous offences.

Drivers charged with exceeding a 0.08 per cent blood-alcohol content or refusing a breath test will have their vehicles confiscated for up to 60 days, while those caught for other distracted driving offences — such as personal grooming and eating — for a third time within a year will have their vehicles seized for up to seven days.

The rules will come with hefty costs for drivers who have their vehicles impounded.

"It's $55 for the tow if you are in Regina or Saskatoon," Brinkworth said, noting that cost increases outside those two cities. "Ten dollars a day is the storage fee at the garage. To get it out, you need to purchase a $50 release form."

Battling distracted driving, Brinkworth notes, remains a major focus for regulators as governments across Canada crack down on motorists who don't hang up behind the wheel.

‘Unbearable sadness’ expressed at funeral for slain RCMP officers

The brother of one of the three New Brunswick Mounties killed in the line of duty told a regimental funeral service Tuesday that the death of Const. Douglas James Larche has left him feeling an overwhelming despair.

Daniel Larche, a master seaman in the Royal Canadian Navy, spoke of the bond he shared with his brother during his eulogy.

“I stand here before you with an unbearable sadness, disbelief, rage, because a great man was taken away from us far too soon,” he told mourners inside the Moncton Coliseum.

“Never in my worst nightmare did I envision a stitch in time that I would be giving his eulogy.”

Police and members of the public filled the hockey arena for the funeral service for Larche, 40, and fellow constables Fabrice Georges Gevaudan, 45, and Dave Joseph Ross, 32.

Ross’s brother-in-law, Adrian Vander Ploeg, recalled how the RCMP officer was making dinner but dropped everything, including leaving the barbecue lid up and the garage door open, to be among the first to respond to a report of a gunman last Wednesday evening.

“For those closest to Dave, that barbecue left still open says everything about who Dave was and his devotion to those around him,” Vander Ploeg said.

Gevaudan was remembered by Geoffrey McLatchie, his spiritual adviser, as a doting husband and stepfather.

“Fabrice lived a heart-centred life, a life of joy and happiness, a life where he connected to the community in which he lived,” McLatchie said.

“He was very comfortable in his own skin and he was his own man.”

RCMP pallbearers carried the flag-draped coffins of the slain officers into the arena.

A beige RCMP Stetson sat atop each casket at the front of the service. Danny, a police dog that served with Ross, was led inside.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper acknowledged a “searing grief” that has enveloped New Brunswick, a province he said he’s proud to call his ancestral home. He said while the justice system will establish what happened, one thing is certain.

“We do not need a verdict to know that what happened here is an outrage,” he said.

RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson and Gov.-Gen. David Johnston were among the mourners. Opposition Leader Tom Mulcair, Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau and a number of premiers also attended, and six other sites in Moncton and four more outside the city were set up for mourners. A public visitation service held Monday drew hundreds of people.

Assistant Commissioner Roger Brown, the commanding officer of the RCMP in the province, saluted the dead officers as well as constables Eric Dubois and Darlene Goguen, two other Mounties who were wounded in the shootings.

“With the eyes of the nation upon us today, I want to publicly say how incredibly proud I am of each and every one of you,” he told the officers in the crowd while choking back tears. “I only wish I could have told Doug, Dave and Fabrice that in person.”

‘Searing grief’

“Together, we struggle for answers. We ask what in God’s name happened here and why. We may never know.”

Prime Minister Stephen Harper, who said that while the justice system will establish what took place, one thing is certain: ‘We do not need a verdict to know that what happened here is an outrage.’

Entire police community feels effect of shootings

Before the funeral service began, people inside the arena stood and applauded for 45 minutes as police officers from across Canada and the U.S. arrived to take their places.

In front of a stage were three large portraits of the slain officers in their dress uniforms. There were also three Canadian flags on the left and right sides of the stage.

Before the service, a procession of about 2,700 police officers wound its way through the city with pipers and drummers leading the mourners.

Four RCMP officers on horseback followed the 1.6-kilometre-long procession, leading three hearses carrying the dead officers.

Members of the RCMP and municipal police forces, as well as correctional officers and U.S. border patrol officers, were among those who marched to the Moncton Coliseum, which can hold about 7,000 people. Public transit buses picked up officers in advance of the televised service.

Brenda Jaillet of Oromocto, N.B., said the shooting deaths have touched her husband, a retired RCMP officer.

“It’s a brotherhood,” Jaillet said outside the coliseum before the service. “What has affected these three members has affected him. It could have been him at any time during his career.” THE CANADIAN PRESS

One dead, one injured in yet another U.S. school shooting

Oregon. Police identify gunman but are not releasing his name after latest campus rampage

A gunman armed with a rifle shot and killed a student Tuesday and injured a teacher shortly after classes started at a U.S. school and was later found dead as police arrived, authorities in Oregon said.

Authorities have tentatively identified the teen gunman, who was found slumped on a toilet in a bathroom, but weren't ready to release the name, Troutdale Police Chief Scott Anderson said.

Authorities say the shooter likely killed himself.

Anderson said the teacher, Todd Rispler, a 50-year-old physical education instructor, suffered non-life threatening injuries and was treated at the scene.

Authorities have also identified the student killed, saying that the 14-year-old victim was killed in the boys' locker room.

The attack panicked students, and a lockdown was ordered.

Morgan Rose, 15, said she hid in a locker room with another student and two teachers.

"It was scary in the moment. Now knowing everything's OK I'm better," she said.

The first reports of shots fired came at 8 a.m. on the next-to-last-day of classes. Police initially seemed uncertain about whether there was a live shooter in the school.

Students were eventually led from the school with hands on their heads. Parents and students were reunited in a supermarket parking lot.

Report. Rich will benefit from income splitting

Employment Minister Jason Kenney says the Harper government has no intention of backing away from its income splitting pledge, despite a new report concluding the plan would exacerbate income inequality and bestow the most benefits to the West.

Kenney made the statement in the House of Commons on Tuesday while debating an NDP motion to do away with the idea.

The report by the left-leaning Broadbent Institute concluded that income splitting would benefit the most affluent single-income families, cost about $3 billion, bestow no benefits to 90 per cent of Canadians, and transfer a disproportionate amount to families in Alberta and Saskatchewan, Conservative strongholds with the strongest economies.

Messi's mystery nausea foxes docs

Shortly after coming on as a second-half sub in Argentina's last World Cup warm-up, Lionel Messi doubled over and appeared to vomit on the pitch. He's done it at least a half-dozen times with Argentina and club team Barcelona, mystifying doctors and fans alike.

"Nerves," says Argentina coach Alejandro Sabella, and that's a diagnosis as good as any. The Argentina captain and four-time world player of the year is under tremendous pressure to lead the Albiceleste to its first World Cup trophy since 1986. The team opens its campaign against Bosnia-Herzegovina on Sunday.

Top athletes throwing up before, during or after a competition is not unusual. Sometimes it's because of the physical stress on their bodies, sometimes because of performance anxiety.

What's unusual about Messi is that it seems to happen quite randomly, not when the pressure would seem the greatest or when he's exhausted himself to the limit.

Barcelona's medical staff hasn't been able to find the cause. Neither have Argentina's team doctors, nor Messi himself. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Advertisers try to score with music

Companies that are advertising for the World Cup are hoping music will strike a chord with fans globally.

Because the FIFA World Cup is the most popular sports event on the planet, advertisers want to take advantage of the large viewing audience. But the World Cup poses problems for companies that are used to making a splash at big sporting events like the Super Bowl with a pricey 30-second spot.

First off, soccer doesn't have very many commercial breaks, with two 45-minutes halves played mostly straight through. Additionally, soccer is a global event, so it's hard to make TV ads that translate across cultures. As a result, brands — both official sponsors and those that just want to capitalize on the event — increasingly are using music to get the world's attention:

Danone's Activia yogurt teamed up with Shakira to update her wildly popular 2010 World Cup Song "Waka Waka," about Africa, with a Brazil-centric video for "La La La." Coca-Cola made a song in English, "The World is Ours," and then created 32 local versions, each sung by a local artist in the native language. And Beats by Dre launched a splashy five-minute video "The Game Before the Game" that shows soccer stars like Neymar Jr. and many others preparing for game time by listening to "Jungle" by Jamie N Commons & The X Ambassadors.

The move is an effort by companies to try to capture the attention of one of the largest global audiences for any event. In the last World Cup four years ago, 3.2 billion people tuned in, according to FIFA. That's compared with the 111.5 million people who tuned into the Super Bowl this year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Social media tracking World Cup games

This year's World Cup will play out on Twitter, Facebook, Instagram and messaging apps like WhatsApp just as it progresses in stadiums from Sao Paulo to Rio De Janeiro.

Nearly 40 per cent of Facebook's 1.28 billion users are fans of soccer. On Tuesday, the world's biggest online social network announced new features to help fans follow the World Cup — the world's most widely viewed sporting event. Facebook users will be able to keep track of their favourite teams and players throughout the tournament in a special World Cup section, called "Trending World Cup." Available on the web as well as mobile devices, the hub will include the latest scores, game highlights as well as a feed with tournament-related posts from friends, players and teams. The company is also launching a page called FacebookRef, where fans can see commentary about the matches from "The Ref," Facebook's official tournament commentator.

Not to be outdone, Twitter touted in a blog post last week that fans can follow individual teams or players and use the hashtag #WorldCup to tweet about the matches, and follow official accounts such as @FIFAWorldCup and @ussoccer for the United States team, for example.

A comparison of the human skull as it has evolved over time.
COURTESY UNIVERSITY OF UTAH

Fistfights could have shaped our faces: Study

Minimizing injury. Man's facial structure may have evolved as our ancestors took beatings, study says

Human faces may have been shaped by violent fistfights.

The University of Utah's findings deal a heavy blow to previous research that suggests changes in bone structure were down to the dietary need to crush hard foods such as nuts.

Lead researcher David Carrier explains to Metro why stronger bones were needed to act as a buttress against a new form of boxing.

Some men have had their fair share of booze-fuelled scraps. But what were our ancestors fighting about?

I think it would have been pretty much the same as gorillas and chimpanzees: competition over females, territory and defence of one's family and offspring. So in some ways it's similar to today.

How do the changes that occurred in hominins and australopiths — the ancestors of Homo sapiens — compare to gorillas?

If you compare the face of a chimpanzee or a gorilla to that of an australopith, it's more stout and robust. The mandible, molar teeth, brow ridges, orbit (socket of the skull), cheekbones and the pillars along the edge of the nose, which provide support, are much thicker. In the early australopiths these parts of the face were absolutely more robust than the same part of the face as male gorillas, which are four times the size.

So why was there a need for such considerable facial reconstruction?

University of Utah biologists contend that human faces evolved to minimize injury from facial punches during fights. JOERN POLLEX/BONGARTS/GETTY IMAGES

This evolution occurred at the same time that our hands were changing in proportion to allow us to make a fist-like club. The bones which are susceptible to fracturing during a fistfight have increased in both early australopiths and humans. And it's the same bones that show the greatest difference between male and female australopiths and Homo lines, including Homo sapiens.

So if their hands were like a club, was their fighting technique more a battering motion than a punch?

That's possible, but we don't know. The australopiths were the first to be capable of a forward striking punch or a modern human's punch. The anatomy was there four to five million years ago.

N.Y.C. settles with Occupy protesters

Civil rights lawsuit. City will pay $538,000 to 14 demonstrators who claim they were arrested in 2012 for 'expressing their views'

New York City has agreed to pay nearly $600,000 US to settle allegations that police wrongfully arrested a group of Occupy Wall Street protesters, marking the largest settlement to date in an Occupy-related civil rights lawsuit, the marchers' lawyers said Tuesday.

The protests against economic inequality inspired similar protests around the U.S. and the world.

The $583,000 US pact involves 14 demonstrators who said police ordered them to leave but prevented them from doing so and arrested them in lower Manhattan early on New Year's Day 2012. The disorderly conduct cases got dismissed, according to the protesters' federal lawsuit, which argues they were arrested "for expressing their views."

"We were out there to send a message, and our rights were suppressed," one of the demonstrators, Garrett O'Connor, said Tuesday. The 34-year-old labour activist said police tackled him to the ground as he tried to follow their order to clear out.

The city didn't immediately comment Tuesday, but it has said the arrests were lawful. A city lawyer had said at a court conference in November that the arrests followed "a very rowdy and tumultuous march," according to a transcript. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new, peaceful use for aerial drones sprouts up in America

Aerial drones, a technology perhaps best known for helping hunt terrorists on the other side of the globe, may soon begin helping U.S. farmers monitor what's happening in their fields.

In Georgia, a group of state and federal officials — along with members of industry and academia — has been working since 2009 to develop a drone that can save a farmer's time and resources during the growing season.

The public got its first glimpse of the group's unmanned aerial vehicle (UAV) at a flight demonstration last month at a research farm in Moultrie, Ga.

By deploying a UAV with a multi-spectral camera to survey crops, farmers could spot water and nutrition issues, insect infestations and fungal infections.

"The UAV saves a tremendous amount of time," said Eric Corban, founder and chief technology officer for Guided Systems Technologies Inc., a Stockbridge, Ga., company that helped develop the software. "Traditionally you would walk the field, and you would only get a small portion of the field sample. The UAV can do it in a fraction of that time and cover the entire field."

Although the technology is only in the testing phase, commercial use could begin once the Federal Aviation Administration issues rules.

"We're working very close with the FAA," said Steve Justice, director of the Georgia Center of Innovation for Aerospace. "They have direction from the Congress to issue rules for the use of unmanned aircraft systems by the fall of 2015." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deal. No new U.S. tax on cargo from Canada, Mexico

Canada's shipping industry appears to have steered clear of a threatened U.S. cargo tax.

The push for a tax on cargo from Canada and Mexico was excluded from the new Water Resources Reform and Development Act, signed into law Tuesday by U.S. President Barack Obama.

"(This) would have been a massive tax grab and a massive congestion problem," pleased Canadian ambassador Gary Doer said in an interview before the bill was signed.

"This would have been a real blow to Canadian ports, and real congestion points at our borders."

The final legislation doesn't include the proposed 0.125 per cent tax, which would have been collected by U.S. Customs on all cargo carried into the U.S. via Canadian ports.

The bill does address some of the complaints from Washington state lawmakers, who say their ports are currently disadvantaged by the American tax system. THE CANADIAN PRESS

WILE E. GOOSTMAN: MACHINE 1, MAN DUMB :(

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

Human evolution lurched ahead the other day, leaving Homo sapiens in the same dust that covers the Neanderthals and other dead branches on the tree of life.

Meet the future: Eugene Goostman. He's a 13-year-old Ukrainian boy. His father is a gynecologist and he owns a gerbil. (Eugene, that is, not his father.)

He's also not a real boy, but a computer program. A chatbot, to be precise.

But this assemblage of hopped-up bits and bytes managed to fool some real humans into believing he was one of us, thereby passing the legendary milestone in the field of artificial intelligence known as the Turing Test, proposed by the British mathematician Alan Turing.

In 1950, Turing predicted that in 50 years a machine would be able to fool at least 30 per cent of interrogators into thinking they were talking to a human being. Well, it took a little bit longer than 50 years (64 to be precise), but Eugene fooled 10 out of 30 judges last week at the University of Reading.

There was an immediate outcry that Eugene was a trick, that his programmers intentionally portrayed him as a child, which would explain his knowledge gaps.

Whatever the flaws in the test or the program, the point is that Eugene managed to fool some of the people in the room. This doesn't surprise me. As computers are getting smarter, I swear people are getting dumber. If you need evidence, just check out these examples from a recent Buzzfeed piece in which real people incisively demonstrate their inferiority:

"Just found out my birthday is the same day as when I was born! Life is crazy!"

Or: "Where's the 2014 Brazil World Cup going to be held?"

Or: "Wow, I can't believe the titanic sunk and the people filming it didn't even stop to help. :("

I could go on, but you get the idea.

Siri-ously

No wonder Eugene Goostman sounds like a real boy. It ain't nothin' special.

Yeah, it's a little creepy getting overtaken by Little Boy Blue. Maybe not as creepy as Her, the recent Spike Jonze movie in which the world's creepiest actor Joaquin Phoenix falls in love with an operating system. Although who can blame him … his operating system has the voice of Scarlett Johansson. Fool me once, twice, whatever.

I haven't fallen in love with my operating system. Yet. But I am fond of her. Siri tells me that right now, it would take me 29 minutes to drive home. That's the word she/it uses. Home. Like we both live there. When Siri first did that, I admit to being touched. Not only did she/it suggest we go home, she gave me precise, accurate directions. It had been a long day. I was tired. I was just glad somebody … or something … knew the way.

Artist lights up night with Spirograph of the skies

Photographer Martin Kimbell creates light drawings that use the picturesque night skies in quiet countryside locations across the U.K. as his canvas.

The 25-year-old from Nottingham, England, uses a technique to create intricate spirals, which look like they could have been created on a '60s-era toy Spirograph. METRO

Hoop dreams

The images include a ribbon of white lights, which meander among the trees, and a tornado-like beam.

Kimbell creates the pictures using long-exposure photography, which involves leaving the camera shutter open for up to an hour.

He throws a spinning hoop fixed with LED lights into the air and waits while its path is captured on the film. METRO

"What I love about light painting is that it gives me a level of control and creative freedom which is rare in most forms of photography. Through the adding of different light patterns, or by illuminating it differently, I can completely transform the scene."

Stuck at the airport? Make a music video

REBECCA WILLIAMS

Airports are contradictory places.

They're exciting because you're headed somewhere and boring because, well, waiting, security lines and more waiting. So what to do while stuck at one? You could pick up a book, eat some snacks, plan your trip — or shoot a music video.

Stop dragon my rep around

Breathing fire.
Fearsome beast of myth tips scales as misunderstood creature

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

The Hobbit author J.R.R. Tolkien described dragon Smaug as "a most specially greedy, strong and wicked worm." The Flight of the Conchords have a song called Albi the Racist Dragon, and on Dragon Day at Cornell University, an effigy of one of the giant beasts is burned while students shout and dance.

They can be fiery, fearsome creatures. "Noble dragons don't have friends," writes Terry Pratchett in Guards! Guards! "The nearest they can get to the idea is an enemy who is still alive."

It's not hard to understand why the folks on Game of Thrones are wary of Daenerys Targaryen's (Emilia Clarke) brood of the beasts when she spouts off lines like, "When my dragons are grown, we will take back what was stolen from me and destroy those who wronged me! We will lay waste to armies and burn cities to the ground!" Then there's Bryagh, the serpentine villain of The Flight of Dragons who not only insults the movie's heroes before dispatching them, he also gobbles up the eggs of other dragons!

Maybe if characters in movies paid more heed to the advice given by author Steven Brust — "Always speak politely to an enraged dragon" — then movies and TV wouldn't have to offer up such a wide array of ways to rid the world of dragons. Look on IMDb, there are dozens of titles containing the phrase "dragon slayer."

The 2010 animated hit How to Train Your Dragon begins in a remote Viking village where killing a dragon is "everything." It focuses on Hiccup (Jay Baruchel), a kind-hearted boy who captures one of the flying behemoths and discovers two things: One, he can't bring himself to kill it, and two, that dragons aren't the fearful monsters everyone thinks they are. He becomes a Dragon Whisperer and the movie shows the serpentine creatures in a different light than the abysmal brutes usually seen on screen.

How to Train Your Dragon hero, Hiccup, voiced by Jay Baruchel. CONTRIBUTED

Baruchel and his best Bud

Toothless hero for young fans

Jay Baruchel has a unique voice. Instantly recognizable, the nasally twang he uses to bring the character of How to Train Your Dragon 2's Hiccup to life is so distinctive it even has its own Facebook fan page.

You would think that kids — who made the Viking teenager and his dragon Toothless so popular on the big screen (the original 2010 movie grossed almost half a billion dollars) and on the TV show and video games — would be thrilled to meet the man behind the voice. Right?

"Friends who have kids will say, 'Hey! Look! It's Hiccup,'" and then it is utter, sheer disappointment," he says. "'This is not Hiccup. It's a real-life human dirtbag I'm looking at.' Although I have to say I was in a liquor store in Los Angeles a few months ago, and I was saying something to the cashier and this guy turned around and said, 'You're funny. You know you're doing something right when you get recognized by your voice,' but usually with the kids, they're super bummed to actually meet me."

Baruchel has voiced Hiccup in two films (with at least one more on the way) and 40 episodes of the television show.

Director Dean DeBlois says that the actor and the character are now interchangeable, with Baruchel bringing character ideas to the table every time out.

"How much input I ultimately have is purely up to (Dean)," says Baruchel.

One of Hiccup's vocal tics unmistakably came from Baruchel — his habit of calling his dragon by the nickname Bud.

"That is clearly me," he says. "I remember the first time we did it in the first one and it just kind of stuck and became a thing. I call everyone Bud in real life and half the work is for me not to call every character in this movie Bud. It's kind of specific to Toothless now. I still fit in some hoser wherever I can."

RICHARD CROUSE

All the rage

"Always speak politely to an enraged dragon."

Author Steven Brust

This weekend, How to Train Your Dragon 2 adds to the list of cinematic dragons who are more misunderstood than actually evil.

The 1941 Disney flick The Reluctant Dragon features a dragon that would rather recite poetry than cause havoc. "You've got to be mad to breathe fire," he says, "but I'm not mad at anybody."

In the live-action DragonHeart, a fire-breather must team with a dragon-slaying knight (Dennis Quaid) to end an evil king's rule. When the giant serpent is accused of eating an adversary, he is indignant. "I merely chewed in self-defense, but I never swallowed."

Eddie Murphy lent some comedic relief to the 1998 animated movie Mulan as the tiny, blue-horned Mushu. He may be the size of the Geico gecko, but don't mention it. "I'm a dragon, not lizard. I don't do that tongue thing."

Always classy Franco's fanfic plucks LiLo-est hanging fruit

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

James Franco and Lindsay Lohan deserve each other, I think. Both of them seem addicted to the spotlight, and neither has any qualms about involving other people in their nonsense. Case in point: James Franco wrote a "short story" about Lohan for Vice's fiction issue.

It's not just about Lohan — Franco fills the piece with anecdotes about his life in Hollywood, circa 2011. By calling it fiction, I'm sure he intends us to ask ourselves what's real and what's made up, which, to be fair, I totally am. The bulk of the piece is about Lindsay Lohan — I'm sorry, "Lindsay Lohan" — letting herself into "James Franco" the narrator's Chateau Marmont bungalow to hit on him. He reads her stories instead of sleeping with her, until she falls asleep. That much Franco has relayed in interviews as fact. But what about the details we haven't heard about before? Here are a few I'm curious about, despite knowing that my curiosity would please James Franco:

- Did Lindsay Lohan really pound on Franco's door, yelling that he was a "bookworm punk blogger f—?"
- Did James Franco really turn in his sullen Oscar hosting performance because he wasn't allowed to dress up as Cher and sing You Haven't Seen the Last of Me?
- Did Lindsay Lohan really spread false rumours that photographer Terry Richardson was shooting a sex book with Lohan and Franco?
- Will Lindsay Lohan sue him?

I don't really approve of kissing and telling, but I have to admit that I'd get through a lot more New Yorker fiction if it was all like James Franco's Lohan fanfic.

Kate finally calls out former beaus for being dopes

After dating both Lance Armstrong and Yankees star Alex Rodriguez, it's surprising Kate Hudson hasn't weighed in on the sports doping issue sooner. But better late than never. In an interview with InStyle magazine, Hudson says she was "as shocked as anyone" when Armstrong confessed to using performance-enhancing drugs. "I personally think that you make the choices you make and you should reap the consequences," she says. "Lance and Alex are phenomenal athletes who have made some bad choices and let a lot of people down. It's a decision they made for themselves, and they've got to loathe it."

All Blackbeard and no hair makes Jackman a sexy pirate

What happened to our beloved Hugh Jackman's hair? Just this weekend he was looking mighty fine in all of his hirsute glory while hosting the Tony Awards. And now this photo appears on Instagram? Reportedly, there's a good reason he's shaved his head — he's getting ready to play the role of Blackbeard in an upcoming movie called Pan.

Portland hits the spot with its weird and wonderful food carts

Would you like tarragon anchovy mayo on that? The city's most famous food stalls combine comfort with courage

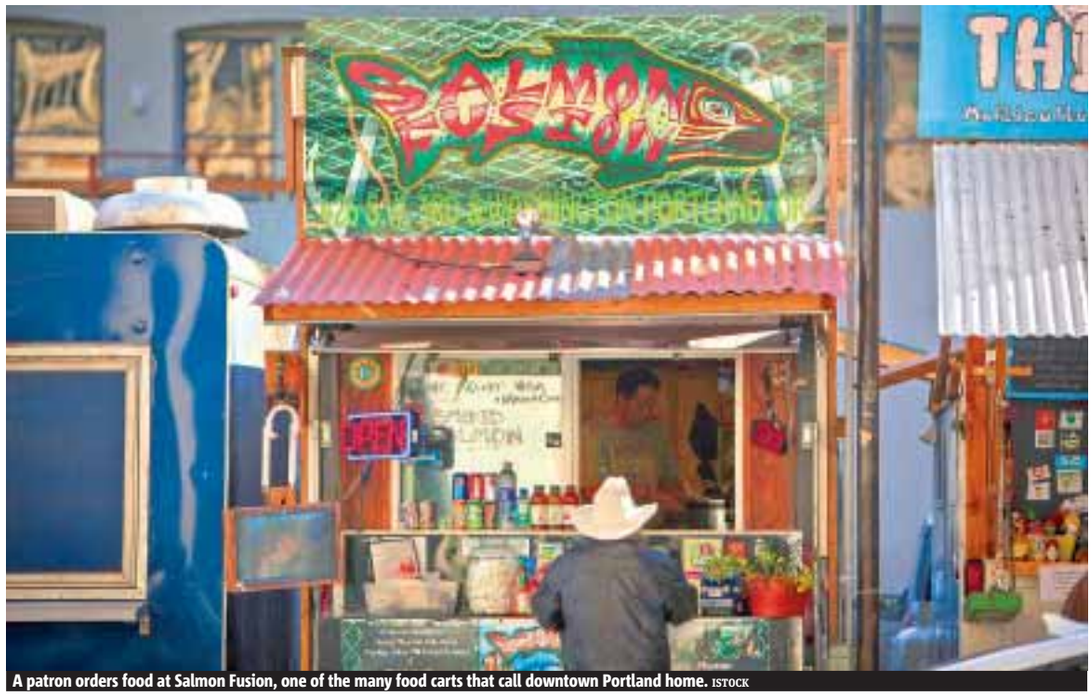
life@metronews.ca



A patron orders food at Salmon Fusion, one of the many food carts that call downtown Portland home. ISTOCK

With over 500 eateries dotting the cityscape, Portland's food carts have become a thing of legend. Unlike most cities' roving food trucks however, most of Portland's kitchens are stationed in so-called pods and serve up more than just uninspired frankfurters. In Portland, foodies can feast on everything from hummus to Himalayan fare. Here is a list of just five of the most far-out food trucks to tempt you on your next trip to Oregon.

Potato Champion
Since 2008, this food cart has been serving up twice-fried Belgian-style pommes frites with a variety of sauces that include Rosemary Truffle Ketchup and Tarragon Anchovy Mayo. But if you're interested in tasting their big signature dish, you'll need to order the PB and J — fries topped with peanut satay and raspberry chipotle sauce. As one can imagine, Potato Champion is especially popular with late-night crowds. Visit potatochampion.com.

808 Grinds
Aloha, foodies! Named "favourite food cart" in an Oregonian reader's poll, this award-winning eatery offers up an array of authentic Hawaiian cuisine, including kalua pig (a kind of pulled pork). For the experimental, you can also taste Spam Musubi (seared marinated spam over rice wrapped in seaweed) with their Garlic Furikake Fries. See 808grinds.com.

Solar Waffle Works
A very unique food cart, Solar Waffle Works is an all-volunteer, non-profit business that relies almost entirely on solar energy to cook all sorts of sweet and savoury waffles from as low as $2.50. Toss in the fact that they manage a training program for at-risk youth in the community and Solar Waffle definitely works. Check out www.pps.k12.or.us/schools/solar-waffle.

Chez Dodo
Mauritius is a long way from Oregon, yet you can get the taste of the tiny Indian Ocean island right in the middle of Portland. The island itself is a mix of different cultures (Portuguese, Indian, African) but is most famous as the home of the famed, extinct Dodo bird. At Chez Dodo, you begin with a base of flat bread or noodles, add a sauce, and top with bean, potatoes, meat and, if you're daring, the Island Fever spicy curry sauce. See facebook.com/chezdodo.

PBJ's Grilled
Founded by Las Vegas expatriates, PBJ's serves all manner of popular grilled peanut butter and jam sandwiches — which can include applewood smoked bacon, hamburger, crispy coconut shrimp and more. Who could have guessed jalapeno peppers would go so well with peanut butter? Visit pbjsgrilled.com.

Plan a food quest

For the most comprehensive list of Portland's exterior eateries, Food Carts Portland boasts a constantly updated list of carts, maps, cuisine categories and menus. In fact, they even offer tours. Visit foodcartsportland.com.

Ooh la la! Top of the Eiffel Tower

So romantic, so ubiquitous, so over-exposed — but still so incredibly neat. The Eiffel Tower is all those things, and you really need to make a pilgrimage to the top of the 1,710 steps in your lifetime. Built in 1889 (recently celebrating its 125th birthday), it was the tallest building in the world at the time: 1,062 feet. The 10,000 tonnes of iron latticework is painted every seven years to ward off the rust and to make sure it looks postcard-perfect for the seven million people that visit each year. Amazing Race ups the drama

Off to the races.
Canada host Jon Montgomery promises an intense season full of villains and heroes

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

My favourite reality travel competition, The Amazing Race: Canada, is coming back for a second season. I tried to get some details out of returning host, Jon Montgomery.

Why should people tune in?
This year the race is harder, the drama is going to be more intense and the teams are going to be awesome, from villains to heroes and back. You will love the same people that moments later you might hate. It's the most real reality TV show out there.

What makes it different from last year?
There are more teams and therefore the race and the number of episodes are longer. This year's racers are more competitive in terms of their physicality and their nature. These people are gamers — students and fans of the show. Alliances were formed, and when teams interact, whether trying to work together or against each other, that always adds drama to the situation.

Can you tell me where the race started this year?
In Canada.

Helpful. Are we going to see provinces that were missed last year ... Manitoba, New Brunswick?
You can't please everybody all the time. We do our best.

Did racers need to bring their passports this year?
They did need to bring their passports, if they didn't have a valid driver's licence. You need ID of some sort.

Jon Montgomery returns to CTV July 8 for the second season of The Amazing Race. CTV

Very cryptic. Were there places you visited that you'll go back to?
Of course! The landscapes were mesmerizing. People will be blown away by the vistas that make up our backdrop to the shenanigans that unfold. We could do another 10 seasons here in Canada and never have the same backdrop twice.

You are unique in that you actually do the detours and roadblocks.
You betcha. From my standpoint, that's the best part. I get to try all of the things. If I didn't do them, it was simply an issue of time constraint. The food-based challenges can be disgusting stuff, but I have to do it. When am I going to get another chance to try? I think that's why people tune in. They can see themselves on the show. They don't need to be gifted in any special way, they just have to have a desire to explore and challenge themselves. And the capacity to travel inter-provincially.

And maybe ... internationally?
Maybe ... stay tuned.

Prepping for Pomp and Circumstance

Convocation. Keep these key points in mind while putting on your cap and gown

ELIAS DA SILVA-POWELL
TalentEgg.ca

If you're soon to attend your convocation, then the last time you were handed a scroll on stage was probably at the end of high school, which may seem like a lifetime ago.

Though you've seen dozens of graduation ceremonies in TV shows and movies, it's easy to get caught off-guard by the reality of convocation.

As a double grad with a host of multiple-degree-holding friends, I've heard a lot about graduation and its various pitfalls.

Don't get me wrong, it's still a great day and an occasion to celebrate. But a little preparation can make a lot of difference. Here are key things you should keep in mind:

Put your best foot forward
The only thing more risky than overdressing for your convocation is a bad footwear choice. Brand new shoes look great, but not when every step means the discovery of a new blister. Similarly, a height boost will only give you a confidence boost until you topple over.

Tip: Unless you're planning to ride a skateboard across the stage, leave your sneakers and running shoes at home. If you buy new shoes, break them in first. Heels should be no higher in inches than the number of years it took to complete your degree.

High shoes, you lose

Heels should be no higher in inches than the number of years it took to complete your degree.

If it's on, turn it off
If your cellphone is on, turn it off. If it's on silent, turn it off. If you're "pretty sure" it's off, turn it off.

Tip: This isn't funny. Even if the speeches are dull, your EDM ringtone isn't going to solve anything.

Get ready to see everyone
The periods before and after the convocation ceremony can feel like the most uncomfortable cocktail party in the world.

The neighbour who broke your heart? Right there. The person you offended in a class debate? Hi. The former friend you no longer speak to? Strained silence.

You'll cross paths with an endless array of these people. You'll even be able to hear their less-than-enthusiastic clapping from the stage, no matter how big the crowd.

Tip: Nod, smile, shake hands — and keep moving. Find (and stay with) your close friends. Consider having a less-problematic personal life the next time around.

Brace for speeches
As someone who has both given and listened to some terrible speeches, I recognize that fine speech-making is much like fine watch-making — a delicate, precise balance of minute parts, all working towards a simple yet elegant goal.

The speeches at your ceremony may be rise-to-your-feet-and-cheer good or Oh-wow-I'm-watching-sunbeams-cross-the-walls bad, but in either case, you should be prepared for awkward jokes, personal anecdotes that go nowhere and discouraging school-of-hard-knocks type observations.

Tip: Giving a speech at your ceremony? Don't use the phrase, "It's tough out there." Everyone is tired of hearing that.

Significant moments can also be incredibly uncomfortable
When you boil it down, the whole "big day" is a backdrop to your moment: the moment when you cross the stage, seize your scroll and stomp gloriously down the stairs, accompanied by roars and cheers. That's a TV/movie thing, though.

For the average student, there's only enough crowd-enthusiasm to carry you partway across the stage. If your ceremony involves multiple steps (get the degree, get a handshake, walk to centre stage, get another handshake, etc.) you may find your big moment has a backdrop of quiet coughing and the rustling noise of hundreds of people sweating quietly.

Tip: At many ceremonies, the audience is specifically asked not to applaud, in an effort to keep the event on-pace. Prime your family and friends to disregard this directive — everyone else will.

You are already taking too many pictures
It's great to live in an age where every device is also a camera, microphone and camcorder.

This is a big day. While you celebrate with friends and family, you should also make sure to take a few photos to commemorate the occasion. Please take a few. Just a few. A few, ok?

Instead of 547 photos of varying quality capturing every moment from when you arrived (confused), to when you crossed the stage (blurry), to when you got outside (exhausted) ... stick with four or five nice, well-lit, non-blurry, non-awkward photos with the people who mean the most to you.

Tip: Get your photos, then take the batteries out of the camera. Or at least, give it to the person with the least interest in photos.

Make a reservation on the far side of town
Depending on your cohort size, the number of restaurants within walking distance of the venue and the overall quality of the culinary scene in your town, it can be almost impossible to get a table for a celebratory lunch or dinner after you've swaggered across the stage. Don't set your heart on visiting your favourite venue if your favourite venue is everyone else's favourite venue.

Tip: If you don't make a reservation, at least have a list of top choices and be prepared to adapt to long lines.

TALENTEGG.CA IS CANADA'S LEADING JOB SITE AND ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADUATES.

Dress cool, dress smart. The robes are hot, and you'll probably put them on at least an hour before you cross the stage. When you find yourself standing in an airless stairwell shoulder-to-shoulder with 140 other people, you'll regret wearing more layers than were strictly necessary. FLICKR: LOYOLAUNIVERSITYCHICAGO

It isn't over just yet

There are a lot of "lasts" involved in finishing school: last lecture, last assignment, last exam.

- Chances are, none of these experiences felt like the end of a chapter in your life. That's because they weren't — and convocation is no exception.
- Though convocation comes with a stage and applause, your life isn't a play, with neatly ordered scenes and cues. You won't get a sense of a finished chapter until you find yourself moving through the next one.

TalentEgg #QuestionoftheDay: Should you focus on quality or quantity during a job hunt?

@michellekj__
If you are applying to jobs that are relevant/you are qualified for/excited about, I think you can do both!

@EDSPowell
Tough question! One thing: make sure you're still able to submit a unique application for each job!

@SamBoucher24
Quality! Take that extra time to make sure your resume is tailored to the position you're applying for.

@janet_ha
Both. It takes persistence and sweat to get your career where you want it to be.

@laurengineer
Quality! If you try to do too much too quickly, you probably won't be putting your best self forward each time.

@SenatSethi
Definitely quality. Quantity implies a lack of focus and a "shotgun" approach, and finding a job is about intentionality!

@Krista4RBC
Quantity if u want a job, Quality if u want a career! Be selective- research & show true interest.

@Recruit_Campus
QUALITY! Focus the extra time on networking! Then you'll hear about jobs before they're posted!

A crunch that goes from appetizer to meatless dinner

Crunchy Vegetable and Lentil Salad. This dish, which is finished with a tasty pesto, is the perfect option for outdoor dining

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

I love making salads to serve up for dinner. They look amazing and are easy to prepare ahead.

This Vegetable and Lentil Salad is a great one to pack along for a dinner picnic in the park. Bring along a baguette and some cheese with a bottle of your favourite wine to enjoy a quiet dinner outdoors.

The lentils in this salad provide a meatless protein option and the perfect texture to enjoy along with the crunchy vegetables.

Grown in Canada, lentils have become a popular addition to many kitchens. Not only canned varieties, which are pantry staples, but also dried lentils can be cooked up quickly with lots of flavour and textures.

No matter what the cuisine, lentils find a place to be enjoyed throughout the dinner routine. Try adding them to your favourite salads, soups or burgers! Yes, lentil veggie burgers can become a big hit in your house, too.

If you have leftover grilled chicken or a can of tuna or salmon, feel free to add it in for a heartier salad.

Serve the Vegetable and Lentil Salad on a bed of greens for a twist or in small portions for a new appetizer idea.

1. In pot, combine the dry green or brown lentils, water and bay leaves; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer gently for 15 to 20 minutes or until tender. Drain and rinse with cold water; drain well and place in large bowl. Stir in celery, carrot, pepper and mint.

2. Pesto Dressing: In a small bowl, whisk together broth, vinegar, pesto, oil and pepper. Stir in feta cheese. Pour over top of salad and toss to coat.

Cooking tips

- White balsamic vinegar offers a slightly sweet flavour to this salad; for more tang, use a cider or white wine vinegar.

Ingredients

- 1/2 cup (125 ml) dry green or brown lentils
- 2 cups (500 ml) water
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 large rib celery, diced
- 1 large carrot, shredded
- 1 red pepper, chopped
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) chopped fresh mint

Pesto Dressing

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) vegetable broth
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) white balsamic vinegar
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) basil or sundried tomato pesto
- 2 tsp (10 ml) canola oil
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) finely crumbled light feta cheese

Rice on the grill — yes, really

Slate cooking, a rustic method popularized in France, makes outdoor grilling more versatile and entertaining.

Using a sizzling hot slate tile is a great way to grill chicken alongside a delicious side of brown rice, which is not often prepared on the barbecue.

Using leftover, cooked brown rice speeds up the process making this an easy, healthy weeknight meal.

Ingredients

- 2-250 g boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 2 tsp (10 ml) olive oil
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) lemon juice
- 1 tsp (5 ml) lemon zest
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- 1 tsp (5 ml) dried oregano, preferably Greek
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) pepper
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) pitted and chopped mixed olives
- 1 small Asian eggplant, diced
- 1 small zucchini, diced
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) sumac
- 2 cups (500 ml) cooked brown rice
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) low fat tzatziki (optional)

1. Wash natural (untreated) slate tile and let dry completely overnight. Place 2-12×12 or 1-12X24 slate tile on cold BBQ grate, lightly oil the slate and turn BBQ on high; let heat for at least 1/2 hr to 45 minute with lid closed to get the tile very hot. Slate will pop and crackle, cracking or splitting may occur while heating.

2. Cut chicken breasts in half, lengthwise through the middle. Season with 1 tsp olive oil, 1/4 cup lemon juice, zest, garlic, oregano and pepper. Place on hot slate to cook, about 10 minutes per side.

3. Meanwhile, in a bowl, toss together 1 tsp olive oil, 1/4 cup lemon juice, olives, eggplant, zucchini, sumac and cooked rice. Place rice on heated slate and grill until zucchini is cooked and eggplant has softened. Serve with tzatziki, if desired.

Turf it! Bowl Field Goal Campaign modernizes venue

James Yausie and Cora Weenk's family has been involved in all levels of football for many years, so they were happy to give back by donating $2 million to help renovate the Bowl at Gordon Howe Park.

"Our dream was to build a field ourselves," said Weenk. "But that's an immense amount of work, and when this opportunity came up, we felt it was a great fit."

Yausie has coached their three children, and nephews and nieces, for the past 15 years, and he saw this as a great way to support and benefit children across the province.

Renovations, including artificial turf and new lighting, will increase the Bowl's available hours from 135 to more than 1,600. The field will be used by football, soccer and other sports teams, from beginners to the elite, bringing in opponents from all over Saskatchewan.

The Bowl is "a massively underused asset in its past and current capacity," says Greg Yuel, the Bowl Field Goal Campaign chair for the Friends of the Bowl Foundation.

Opened in September 1960, this important community facility has never received renovations. The Friends of the Bowl Foundation aims to fix that by modernizing the venue into a CFL-regulation field. So far, they've raised $4.9 million toward their $11 million goal, and Yuel expects the foundation and its supporters will be able to raise over half of the funds.

He says now is the time for the government to step in to help them reach their final goal. "This is a great deal for the city and province," said Yuel.

Yausie agrees. "It takes all levels — civic government, provincial government, and a little bit from all of us — to get this done now," he said.

Carnivore Trail to make its debut

The Saskatoon Zoo Foundation is embarking on an ambitious $5-million fundraising campaign to build an exhibit unlike anything in Western Canada, and it's only the second of its kind in the country.

The Carnivore Trail will be an exciting multi-dimensional attraction featuring a spectacular glass viewing tunnel for spectators to get up close to wolves and cougars in their brand new homes. New facilities are also planned for Arctic foxes and a must-see — the wolverines.

All of this is part of a retro-fit of an approximately two-acre portion of the current zoo. The Carnivore Trail focuses on the carnivores of north-central Saskatchewan and will incorporate interpretive areas telling the story of the interaction of the animals with First Nations people. Northern icons including a trappers cabin and float plane will depict early economic development of the northern part of the province. There will also be an opportunity to interpret the mining industry and its role in creating employment opportunities for northerners.

The Saskatoon Zoo is the province's only zoo and annually attracts close to 145,000 visitors. The Carnivore Trail will become an attraction within an attraction. Attendance is expected to increase by 20 per cent with the addition of the project — an economic impact of approximately $1.83 million over ten years. The new facility will certainly create return visits. In terms of tourism, the Saskatoon Zoo will become a vital attraction — creating a positive economic impact for the city of Saskatoon.

As it continues to grow, so does the need for a place like the Saskatoon Forestry Farm Park and Zoo. The facility has become central to rapid-growing housing developments that now surround it. More families utilize the park and zoo year after year, adding to the quality of life for Saskatoon residents.

The Carnivore Trail campaign will be consistent with other capital development projects at the zoo. The project will move forward in a fiscally responsible and sustainable manner with the objective of increasing revenues through increased visitation and provision of quality visitor experiences. The project is designed with Saskatchewan families in mind, and further, attracting visitors from outside the province.

The Carnivore Trail campaign is offering branding (naming) rights to the overall facility — glass tunnel, individual animal exhibits, icons and other trail amenities. We welcome interest from the Saskatchewan corporate community and individual donors. The project will have special appeal to companies who have a vested interest in making Saskatoon a better place to live.

Individual donors with a love for animals, as well as bigger and better facilities for them to inhabit, will also be interested in contributing to the project.

To find out more about the Carnivore Trail and how you can contribute, contact the Saskatoon Zoo Foundation at 306-975-2241 or go to the website at saskatoonzoofoundation.com. An impressive 3D video of the Carnivore Trail has been produced thanks to the financial support of Cameco. Potential donors are invited to book a private screening of the video by contacting the Zoo Foundation.

Reeling Rangers feeling rotten in the Big Apple

Stanley Cup final.
Down 3-0, New York finding it hard to hang on after crippling losses

Sleep was understandably hard to come by for the New York Rangers on Monday.

They had just lost Game 3 of the Stanley Cup final to the Los Angeles Kings in demoralizing fashion, falling into a 3-0 series hole that feels nearly impossible to dig out of. By Tuesday morning it was clear there was more tossing and turning than turning the page.

"I'm not going to lie to you, it's pretty much impossible to be upbeat," alternate captain Brad Richards said.

Upbeat would be just about the last word anyone could use to describe the Rangers, who will find themselves on the eve of potential elimination in Game 4 Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden. Despondent, defeated and devastated would be more like it.

Coach Alain Vigneault knows there's no sense hiding from those emotions.

"We're down 3-0. We're all lacking sleep. This is tough," Vigneault said.

Short on luck?

Showing up hasn't been the issue for the Rangers. They led Games 1 and 2 by multiple goals and outshot the Kings 32-15 in Game 3.

There isn't much for the Rangers to be cheery about. Not after two overtime defeats in Los Angeles and one back home that included allowing a goal with 0.7 seconds left in the first period and being unable to crack Jonathan Quick.

Reality seemed to set in by the third period of Game 3 as many fans who paid a premium price to attend the first cup final game at the Garden in 20 years had already left.

Even as players talked on Tuesday about bad bounces and the luck the Kings have enjoyed, there's not much solace in being a couple of fortunate turns from maybe even leading this series.

"However we might want to look at this — we could be up by two games to one instead of being down by three, etc. — it doesn't matter," Vigneault said.

Machado to appeal 5-game suspension for tossing bat

Manny Machado figured he might be suspended for intentionally throwing his bat on the field while at the plate.

What the Baltimore Orioles third baseman didn't expect is that the punishment would be so harsh.

Machado received a five-game suspension and an undisclosed fine Tuesday for tossing his bat in Sunday's game against Oakland.

He has appealed the suspension, which was slated to start immediately. Machado was in the starting lineup Tuesday against Boston.

"I don't want to be down for five days," Machado said. "We're just going to go ahead and get that down, and that's it. Need to try to help out this team in any way."

Machado let his bat fly toward third base after swinging at a pitch from Fernando Abad in the eighth inning. The bat-toss came during a plate appearance in which Abad threw successive high-and-tight pitches.

After the bat went soaring, both benches emptied. Machado and Abad were ejected. Abad was fined but not suspended.

Pressure is on for host Brazilians

World Cup. Winning the country's sixth championship is the only prize the home crowd will settle for

It's almost time. The day Brazilians have been anxiously waiting for is finally arriving.

Brazil plays Croatia on Thursday to get the home World Cup underway, beginning its quest for a sixth world title almost seven years after the nation was picked as host.

After so much talk about delays, protests and problems, fans at last are getting a chance to cheer for the national team on home soil in football's showcase tournament.

If Brazil wins the opening game, the fact that the stadium in Sao Paulo isn't even fully finished yet will quickly be forgotten. A loss, quite simply, is unthinkable for a nation whose identity is so closely linked to its football team.

Brazil hasn't hosted the World Cup since 1950, when it endured a heartbreaking loss to Uruguay in the final. This time, everybody knows that only the title will be enough to please the home crowd.

"We are all eager to get started, we are just counting the days," Brazil midfielder Ramires said Tuesday. "We know that the fans have confidence in our team and they are behind us. We have to do everything possible to try to win this World Cup. We know everybody is expecting us to do it."

Boosted by the home crowd, Brazil is one of the main favourites to recapture the trophy won by Spain four years ago. But the other usual World Cup contenders will be trying to spoil the party in the land of football, including Germany, Italy, Argentina and the Netherlands, runner-up in 2010.

Brazil is trying to become the first nation to win the World Cup at home since France did it in 1998. The Brazilians were eliminated in the quarter-finals of the last two tournaments, to France in 2006 and the Netherlands in 2010.

A festive World Cup atmosphere has taken over Brazil in the run-up to the tournament despite the country's preparation problems and the threats of protests. Brazilians had been slow to get into the World Cup mood, but now streets are being painted with the green and yellow colours and local flags are being displayed on windows of homes across the country.

The crowd support is one of the biggest reasons coach Luiz Felipe Scolari has been saying loud and clear that Brazil is obligated to win the World Cup at home. Players also don't hide that they believe Brazil is the main title favourite.

"We know that we will have the fans behind us, and together I think we have a great chance of reaching our final goal, which is to win the World Cup," starting midfielder Luiz Gustavo said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hosts on a roll

Brazil begins the tournament having won 15 of its last 16 matches, the only loss a 1-0 result at Switzerland in the first match after the Confederations Cup.

- Brazil will start the World Cup with the same lineup that won the Confederations Cup, with 22-year-old Barcelona striker Neymar leading the team.

Johnny be good. Browns coach 'not concerned' over Manziel's excursions

The Browns aren't worried about Johnny Manziel running out of bounds off the field.

Or floating on pool rafts.

After a weekend of partying in Texas, where he was photographed floating on an inflatable swan while drinking champagne in a nightclub pool, Manziel was on the field Tuesday as the Browns opened a mandatory three-day minicamp.

The team is not making their popular Heisman Trophy-winning rookie quarterback — or starter Brian Hoyer — available to the media this week.

Manziel has left Cleveland each of the past three weekends, first taking a trip to Las Vegas, then to Los Angeles for a seminar with other rookies and then to his home state, where in addition to having some fun, he got drafted by the San Diego Padres and attended Game 2 of the NBA finals in San Antonio, sitting near Miami's bench while wearing a retro Cavaliers' cap.

Following practice, Browns first-year coach Mike Pettine said he's not worried about how his young QB spends his free time.

"I'm not concerned," Pettine said. "I would become concerned if it was something criminal and I would be concerned if it affected his job. There's a lot of our guys, if when they leave here if they were followed around, you'd get some very similar pictures. I don't know about an inflatable swan, but you'd still get some pictures."

Golf. Mickelson buckling down for latest challenge

Phil Mickelson spent five hours in the stifling heat Tuesday at Pinehurst No. 2 with a lot on his mind.

He was trying to sharpen his game, figure out what it will take to finally win a U.S. Open and make enough putts with his claw grip to avoid losing to some of golf's new young stars.

This major has a reputation as the toughest test in golf.

It's every bit of that for Mickelson.

"I really believe that this week is testing a player's entire game," Mickelson said. "Because it forces you to make good decisions, to choose the right club off the tee, hit solid iron shots into the green and utilize your short game to save strokes. It's just a wonderful test ... the best test I've seen to identify the best player."

His definition of Pinehurst and its rugged, natural look would seem to require every ounce of concentration.

And that could be his biggest challenge.

Former Cy Young winner dies at 57

Bob Welch, the 1990 AL Cy Young Award winner of the Oakland Athletics and the last major leaguer to win at least 25 games in a season, has died. He was 57.

Welch won the Cy Young Award after going 27-6 with a 2.95 ERA. He finished 211-146 with 3.47 ERA in 17 seasons with the Los Angeles Dodgers (1978-87) and Athletics (1988-94). THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

2014 BMW i3

- Type. Four-door, four-passenger, rear-wheel drive hatchback
- Engines (hp). Electric motor with lithium-ion battery; optional 650cc range-extending gasoline engine
- Base price (incl. destination). $44,950

Market position

The i3 should resonate with those who want an emissions-free, city-sized car, but prefer a premium brand. Those with SUVs may find it a viable second car for errands and commutes, too.

Points

- The cabin contains environmentally friendly materials such as bamboo, naturally tanned leather, and a dash made from plants.
- The navigation system can show the car's range, including how traffic, hills or temperature will affect it, as well as nearby public charging stations.
- The i3's manufacturing process uses 50 per cent less energy, and 70 per cent less water, than that of a conventional car.

The i3 has a range of about 160 kilometres on a charge.

Safety

Front, side, curtain, and knee airbags; dynamic stability control; tire pressure warning; battery safety terminal; anti-whiplash head restraints; emergency calling system.

This zippy car's no compromise

Review. The 2014 BMW i3 may be electric, but with the ability to reach up to 150 km/h, it's far from a golf cart

JIL MCINTOSH
drive@metronews.ca

Mention BMW, and most people think of sports cars or luxury cruisers. But the company's newest model is something completely different: a funky little electric city car with the potential to change the way many people get from A to B.

It's called the i3, with the "i" standing for innovation. Small on the outside, but extremely roomy on the inside, it was designed from the ground up to be an electric car, rather than a conversion from a gasoline model. It's on sale now, but will only be available from specific dealers in Toronto, Montreal, and Vancouver initially.

Its unusual design consists of two modules: an aluminum frame that contains both the electric motor and lithium-ion battery, and a passenger compartment formed from carbon fibre. These are costly materials, but their light weight allows BMW to use a smaller, less-expensive battery to power the car.

The i3 has a range of approximately 160 kilometres on a charge, which takes about three hours on 240-volt current. BMW says that most Canadians only drive an average of 47 km per day, but for those who fear being stranded, an optional two-cylinder gasoline engine can be added. When the battery runs down, the gas engine acts solely as a generator to make more electricity.

Driving the i3 is a blast. This is no golf cart: Acceleration is snappy, and it's capable of reaching 150 km/h. It captures energy when decelerating, feeding it back into the battery as electricity. This regenerative braking slows the car quickly, and once you get the hang of it, you'll hardly touch the brakes in city traffic.

The steering is well-weighted, with fairly sporty handling. Even though it's a featherweight, it feels substantial, and the comfortable seats have a premium feel. You're treading lightly on the environment, but it never feels like a compromise. Electric vehicles are still a small sliver of the market, and probably will be for a while, but models like the i3 are a considerable step closer to making batteries the fuel of the future.

Alfamania. The 4C Coupe leads the comeback charge after nearly two decades, with a slew of other Alfa models to follow

drive@metronews.ca

Alfa Romeo is making its return to the North American market after saying "Ciao" nearly two decades ago.

This summer, the rear-wheel-drive, mid-engine 2015 4C Coupe, unveiled at the New York auto show, leads the comeback charge. In the coming weeks, parent Fiat is expected to announce a timeline on when a slew of other Alfa models will join the fray.

Dustin Hoffman's character drives a red Spider Duetto in The Graduate. CONTRIBUTED

While we await Alfamania to take hold on these shores again, let's turn back the clock and examine the Italian icon's pop culture ascendency.

Alfa Romeo made a giant splash in The Graduate when Dustin Hoffman's red Spider Duetto runs out of gas a few blocks from the church, forcing him to ditch the sweet ride and sprint the last few blocks.

He arrives in the nick of time, just as the bride and groom are about to kiss, and yells out "Elaine!"

The scene sustained Alfa's appeal for a generation; there was even an Alfa Graduate edition that came out in the 1980s. The first series of Duettos was nicknamed Osso di Seppia, Italian for cuttlefish bone, after its elegantly rounded and tapered tail end.

Battista "Pinin" Farina, the famed Ferrari designer, conceived the alluring esthetic and would pass away just a short while after the Duetto debuted at the Geneva Auto Show in 1966.

Of course, Alfa's appeal goes beyond petrolheads, public-access TV hosts, and its service as cougar-bait.

Robbie, the Kellerman's waiter and dancer impregnator who serves as the bad guy in 1987's Dirty Dancing, quips in the movie that he's saving up his hard-earned tips to buy one of Alfa's sleek convertibles.

Further cementing Alfa's bad-boy cred, in the opening sequence of Quantum of Solace, the sophomore Daniel Craig Bond flick, a pair of black Alfa 159s with machine gun-toting henchmen give James' Aston Martin DBS V12 chase around a tight and twisting mountain stretch on the Eastern shores of Italy's Lake Garda.

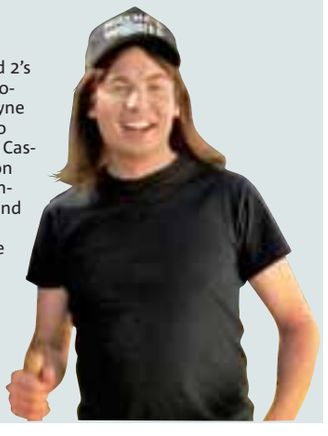
While 007 could probably still elude a fleet of the new 4Cs, the lightweight stunner will nonetheless leave sports car nuts quivering. Built on a carbon-fibre monocoque (in which the chassis is integrated with the car body), and powered by an all-aluminum 1750 cc turbocharged four-cylinder engine that produces 237 hp and 258 lb-ft of torque, it can accelerate 0-62 mph in 4.5 seconds.

Hardcore Alfisti will want to get in line now to score one of the 500, limited-run, Launch Edition models.

They come stocked with a flurry of special features — from a carbon-fibre rear spoiler and mirror caps to red-lacquered brake calipers. It will be available in June ahead of the regular 4C release.

Schwing!

In one of Wayne's World 2's countless "Schwing!" moments, Mike Myers' Wayne hops into an Alfa Romeo Duetto en route to stop Cassandra's wedding. Simon & Garfunkel's Mrs. Robinson plays on the radio and the fuel gage reads "E," spoofing Alfa's Graduate scene.



Give your brake system a tune-up

Road trip safety. Regular checkups and maintenance are key to ensuring that you don't become a danger to yourself or fellow drivers

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
drive@metronews.ca

You don't need an automotive expert to tell you why your vehicle's brakes are probably its most important safety system — or why they should be maintained regularly and not taken for granted.

Ahead of the warm-weather travel season, an inspection of your vehicle's brakes is a fantastic idea — especially if you'll be travelling in a vehicle heavily loaded with passengers and gear.

Operating a vehicle with poorly maintained brakes is a danger to you, your family and your fellow motorists. Plus, in many newer vehicles, healthy brakes are vital to proper operation of other safety systems like stability control, traction control, and trailer sway control.

Remember: brakes often give off numerous warning signs that they'd like some attention when there's a problem, and a mechanic can inspect and assess your vehicle's braking system quickly, adding confidence ahead of a road trip. If you're heading in for a pre-summer oil change or tune-up, be sure to have the mechanic give your ride's brakes a look-over.

Like most other systems in your vehicle, brakes use fluid and components and consumable parts that should be inspected, serviced and replaced from time to time.

Pads and rotors provide the all-important friction required to slow or stop your ride.

When the friction-generating pads are nearly worn out, a small metal tab attached to each one contacts the surface of that brake rotor to create an annoying, high-pitched squeal. That's your cue to call the garage and book a brake job as soon as possible. Ignoring the squeal is a bad idea which can result in dangerously low levels of stopping power, along with brake rotor damage.

Brake fluid, which transfers pedal pressure to those pads and rotors via brake lines attached to calipers at each wheel, should be inspected for level and quality on a regular basis — just like the fluid in your transmission or engine. As brake fluid ages, it collects contaminants and wears out, reducing the life and effectiveness of other brake system components and even accelerating the rusting of your brake lines.

Ask your mechanic to assess the condition of your brake fluid and brake lines, and ask whether they'd recommend a brake fluid flush. This procedure is fairly simple and ensures that new, top-quality fluid is being utilized by your system. As it is with other automotive systems, fresh fluid is key to long-term system durability.

A final note: Your braking system is only as good as the tires that transfer its stopping power to the road, so be sure to have a tire inspection — including pressure check and adjustment — completed as part of your pre-summer brake system maintenance.

Brake components can collect rust and dirt. CONTRIBUTED

Due for a cleaning

Ask if removal and "cleaning up" of your brakes is warranted.

- As time passes, rust and dirt accumulate within various brake system parts, negatively affecting lubrication and functionality of the specially lubricated 'pins' which allow the calipers to slide into and away from the rotors.
- Proper brake system lubrication maintains stopping power, improves brake caliper life and can even reduce fuel consumption — making the job a worthwhile investment.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
If you have a crush on someone, let them know. There is no guarantee that they will return your feelings but even if they do not, they will be flattered by your interest and you'll know where you stand.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You seem to have retreated into your shell and in doing so have lost contact with a number of people. Make it a priority today to look them up and let them know you still exist — and care.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You could make an issue of something that annoys you but is it worth the effort? There are so many things going right that you can afford to let minor annoyances pass you by.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Something that once seemed beyond you is within reach and you can easily make it your own over the next 24 hours. Once you've got it, don't hold it too tightly. Too much possessiveness is rarely a good thing.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Much as you'd like to help a loved one today if they signal that they want you to keep your distance, respect that. You'll make matters worse if you interfere where you're not invited.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Someone you have not seen for a while will come back into your life over the next 24 hours. You may still be a bit sore that they walked out on you without reason but let it pass. You were made to be together.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Don't pay much attention to material things today. What matters is not how much you earn but how happy you are on the inside. Bank accounts are one thing — spiritual accounts quite another.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may want to tear everything down and start again from scratch but is that necessary? You may regret it in the long-term if you destroy what you have created.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Even a Sagittarius gets it wrong now and again so don't take it to heart if you have made some kind of mistake. And don't try to cover it up either. You are always bold in your successes, so be bold in your failures too.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
If you live in dread of things that might never happen you will almost certainly miss out on something that would have made life a lot more exciting and a lot more rewarding.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Push yourself forward today and let people in positions of power know who you are and what you can do. Most likely they know already but it won't hurt to remind them. Be keen.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Some may complain that you're making life difficult. And you can be certain that you're doing the right thing. It's not not about making things difficult for them but making things easier for you. SALLY BROMPTON
